Author:

Claire Mallet grew up with cicadas, olive trees, and lavender: in Provence, in the South of France. She has been living in Quebec's Eastern Township since 1995, an area populated with deer. During the summertime, Claire climbs the big pine tree behind her house and writes... curled up on her favourite branch. Claire loves to write and encourages children to read and to realize their dreams. She tours schools in Quebec, Canada and France with her acoustic guitar.

Story (7 years and up):

One day, two adventurous feet decide to change their names and go to China. On their way, unusual encounters plunge them into incredible adventures. Even if they are able to understand Chinese and everything that animals say, they are taken prisoner by two men in black... Will their new friends be able to help them in their present predicament? An out of the ordinary story with a quiet camel, a heron and a child acrobat!. An engaging story for young readers. This book is ideal for improving reading confidence.

Excerpt:

— On dit que d'avoir les deux pieds dans la même bottine, ça ne mène nulle part. Nous sommes vigoureux et en bonne santé, nous sommes faits pour marcher. Partons !

— Partons, partons, ironisa le pied blanc, mais pour aller où ?

— Tu sais bien, mon rêve depuis toujours !

— Quoi ! Tu veux aller en Chine ! s'écria Pied Droit, estomaqué.

— Exactement, tu viens avec moi ?

— En Chine ! Il est fou, déclara Pied Droit en s'adressant aux herbes. Pour moi, une bonne chaussette, une bonne chaussure, et me voilà le plus heureux des pieds !

— Ffff... tu parles d'une vie plate ! soupira Pied Gauche. Si tu préfères rester ici, dis-le maintenant, parce que moi, je m'en vais.
